Rejoice IN THE Lord ALWAYS

We are coming down to the wire, or should I say trumpet. Get ready and stay ready for the Great Grab when Jesus comes to receive his own in preparation for the years of judgment that follow. Now is the time, the only time, to tell those who have never heard, and to warn those who have heard but continue to reject the Lord Jesus Christ. Now is the time to lead your children to solid faith in Christ. I can understand why it says God will wipe away all tears from our eyes when you consider that some parents will be raptured, knowing their teenager was left behind to endure the Tribulation. It is time to put away the foolishness, no more complaining, no more bitterness, no striving; stop all the negativity, blaming someone for your unhappiness. The order of the day is, “Rejoice in the Lord always: and again I say, Rejoice” (Philippians 4:4). Take a cue from Hannah Schrock in the article Finding the Joy. There is a paragraph in there that is heavenly music. It makes God smile. See if you can guess which one. ■

My Story

by Debi Pearl

In the Bible, we find many stories of God's people being put through fiery trials. Job, Abraham, David, Jeremiah, Daniel, and even Samson are a few that come to mind. Once they endured the trials faithfully, God found them fit to do His will. God tells their stories to teach us that those who know Him will often, like saints of old, experience rough times; and He wants us to have examples of what to expect in this earthly process of becoming fit for our Master's service. We tend to think of the heroes of faith as in a different bracket, but these Bible stories reveal they were humans just like us. We can see ourselves in them, experiencing the same fear, and sometimes faithlessness. The trials of life are meant to cause us to see the eternal above the temporal. When we respond to the fiery trials in faith, it burns away the world and works for our good and His glory.

“That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ” (1 Peter 1:7).

This is my story of how we were put through the fire, which, at times, seemed to consume me. When I look back, I realize God was proving me, testing me, and making me ready to do the work He had for me. You notice that I call this my story rather than our story. Mike was the one hit so hard with diseases, but he says he slept through most of our fiery trials. You will understand why he says that after reading this. I was wide awake the whole time. I would like to say I rested in God’s mercy, but the reality is I spent a great deal of time full of fear. Many of you that are reading this have been through the fires of life, so you understand; and, for many, there are rough days soon to come. I am here to tell you that in the end, it’s worth it all.

HERE’S My STORY

If you had seen us in 1979 you would have thought we were just a couple of Jesus-loving hippies. Oh, but we were young, and we were riding high. We made our living by selling art from a booth in a Memphis mall during the Christmas season. Mike, my tall, dark, handsome, and muscular husband stayed at the booth painting what we called “quickies.” These were simple, repetitive landscapes that provided entertainment to the spectators (which included a lot of ladies) all day, seven days a week, for about five weeks. Depending on the year and how many young children I had at the time, I would show up most days to do my small part of painting and selling. The Christmas season of 1979 found us both there painting and selling as fast as we could. It was a very profitable year of sales; we were rolling in the dough. Little did we know that by early spring great calamities would befall us. We would go through years of fire. But who knows what lies ahead?

This was our Kiosk at the mall.

These were my specialty! We would sell over 500 a year. ~Debi

It was an early spring Sunday morning when the headache started. Mike had migraine headaches all his life, so when he complained of a headache I didn't think much of it. But when he asked me to call the men of the church to come and lay hands on him and pray, I was surprised, since he had never asked them to pray for him before. I anxiously waited for them, but not one man showed up.

By the next morning, Mike told me to take him to the doctor because the headache was worse than any he had ever experienced.

After a long wait, he almost wasn't able to walk; his voice was slurred, and he had to have his eyes covered because he couldn't bear the light. He was unconscious before they got him into a room. He lay in a coma for ten days while the doctors tried to figure out what was wrong with him. It was Mike's mom who informed the doctors that he had the symptoms of encephalitis. She was correct.

Encephalitis is an infection of the lining of the brain. There is no treatment. One-third of the people who get it die, with another third ending up with some brain damage, resulting in permanent physical disabilities. The medical establishment doesn't follow up on the last third, so it is assumed they are normal. The doctors said Mike had a severe case.

Mike said the first thing he remembers while in the hospital was when one of the young, unstable ex-addicts of our church slipped in and lay hands on him and whispered a prayer of healing. Mike woke from the coma. After eleven days, he was back on his shaky feet, asking what had happened in the last week and a half; but he was far from normal.

Among other nasty things, encephalitis seems to disrupt the production of dopamine, which is often referred to as the feel-good neurotransmitter/hormone.

The old documentary "Awakening" (free on YouTube) portrays the long-term effects of encephalitis. The film reveals how a synthetic dopamine drug awakened those who had been brain locked for many years. It also shows how even human touch, which releases dopamine, helps the brain function better. The show is worth watching, at least it was for me, since I ended up living the encephalitis nightmare for a number of years while Mike struggled to regain his memory. The worst part was, I didn't have a clue as to what was wrong with Mike, and he didn't think anything was wrong. He just thought he had a poor memory able to resume teaching the Bible as before, remembering Scripture with clarity. This was amazing since in almost everything else his brain was mush.

The disease caused him to have peculiar insecurities. He didn't allow me to drive anywhere. Months passed and then years with this odd confusion and lack of short-term memory ever-present. When I needed to go to the grocery store, he would take the children and me and drop us off; he was not comfortable going into stores. Oddly, he refused to take me to two different places on the same day. It caused him stress, though he didn't think he was stressed. He just felt the need to get back home where everything made sense. If I needed to go to the drug store or we needed to get gas for the car, then we would have to go on separate trips. Mostly, he just put off going anywhere.

On several occasions, he drove home without us. I tied ribbons to his fingers and to the steering wheel of our car to help him remember to pick us up. I taped notes everywhere to help him remember simple things. One time he went to my mom's house and asked her where I was. She helped him think the day's events through until he remembered he had left us at the grocery. It was July—HOT, (over 100 degrees) and I was eight months pregnant. The ice cream had all melted, as we had waited for hours. Cell phones were unknown at the time. He was able to make kitchen cabinets for people, but couldn't remember who had ordered them, or where they lived or how to get them there, even though I had the paperwork for him to follow. I went with him on the job to help him find his way. It was during this time that he came to see that he was missing large sections of his daily memory. This was a breakthrough. Just his noticing his memory loss let us know he was getting better.

I don't think any of our friends (except my parents and maybe one close buddy) realized what we were living through. I was front and center for the next two Christmas seasons at the mall. When things overwhelmed me, Mike would show up to paint pictures. He was just as good at art as he had ever been. The disease seemed to pick and choose which areas of the brain to muddle.

By December 1982, Mike's brain had made significant improvement, although he still had bad memory issues. But he was able to run the art booth. Right after the Christmas season, we left with two other families for a two-months mission trip to Belize in Central America. I was newly pregnant. It turned out to be a tough nine weeks, living in near-primitive conditions with limited food and almost no protein. I was so glad to be back home. Sadly, unknown to us, Mike had contracted malaria while in Belize, although it would be six months before it manifested itself.

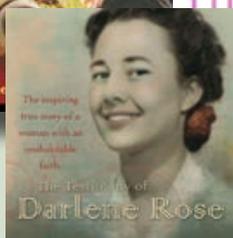

By September, I was full-term with baby number five and had planned another home birth. I went to the doctor one last time to make sure all was well, since we didn't have a midwife. He told me I was already in labor, fully effaced and 4 cm dilated, so get home fast. I was delighted.

I stopped to pick up mail and saw a letter from Shelby County Court summoning us to court and threatening to take our children if we didn't STOP homeschooling and put them in public school immediately. I walked into the house to show Mike the letter when the children came running, saying Daddy was really sick. He was indeed. Mike had thrown up all over the bed and floor. He was burning with fever. I told the children to go outside and play so I could clean and try to find out what was wrong with Daddy. Within minutes, I heard terrible screams. The older children had taken the almost two-year-old and put her in the swing, which, unknown to them, was directly over a yellow jacket's ground nest. The two older kids fled to the pond. Nathan, who was almost five, returned, grabbed his baby sister and ran to the house. Nathan, our hero, was stung four times on his head and neck. My brain just couldn't process so much at one time. I felt like I was living a nightmare. Remember, I was in labor with number five, and I have very short labors.

Later that evening, Mike woke and seemed normal for a brief two hours, but we didn't know if the fevers would hit again. He told me to watch Nathan all night because the swelling could close up his breathing. I had just stripped the bed, cleaned, and mopped; and now, I had a sweet little boy who was so swollen he couldn't see. I could sense the trauma and fear I was experiencing had caused my body to stop labor.

After a couple of hours, Mike's fever returned. All night I put cold, wet clothes on his burning, fevered head while he thrashed and called out weird numbers; and then I would go to Nathan to bathe his swollen face. I can't tell you how tired a person can be. At daybreak, I called both sets of parents and they came. My dad was a Navy vet and told us Mike had malaria (we learned later it was a very BAD kind of malaria). We got meds, and four days later Mike was slightly recovered and under his mama's care. I joined him there, and an hour later labor started again. The baby was born within 15 minutes. I was and am so thankful for our parents. Mike says he can remember parts and pieces of this time in our life.

By now, it was mid-September.

Mike was weak as water, but thankfully, his brain seemed to be working better. The court was still hanging over our heads, threatening us and sending Child Services out to question our children. We were on TV and in the newspaper, as supposedly, the first homeschoolers of Tennessee. Mike was having to give TV interviews, answering hostile questions. The devil really knows how and when to hit where it matters the most. Our situation got so tense that Mike actually taught the kids how to crawl out a basement window and escape through the woods to a barn about a mile away, where grandparents would pick them up and haul them out of state if the cops and Child Services came to get them. More than all the hardships we had been going through, the threat of losing my children put me in an on-going state of panic.

And to top it off, our main source of income was from sales at the mall, which started in November.

That season, I laid my newborn in a basket at my feet while I painted simple pictures and entertained those walking by. Mike was still in recovery mode and often played Mr. Mom. I am not as good an artist as Mike (and certainly not as good an entertainer), plus the economy had taken a bad hit, so that year at the mall sales were dismal. This was when we learned what a recession was. It would be our last year at the mall. I was having to learn how to make big decisions. It was hard. I couldn't pay our yearly house note at the bank, so I had to take out a loan to just pay the interest, which had gone up to 22%. Within two years we put our house up for sale and moved to Cane Creek. You can read the rest of the story here.

Why had all these sicknesses and hardships hit us? It was like BAM—BAM—BAM. Were we being punished? When you are in the fire, it is hard to see anything BUT THE FIRE. Looking back, I can see God's refining fire was doing just what we needed. Just like with His servants of old, God had to prove my faithfulness as Mike's help meet so He could use me to write Created to Be His Help Meet, which is now in 17 languages and read by women all over the world. Mike always said I needed to get a backbone and stand strong in the face of obstacles and criticism. That time of fiery trials certainly pushed me to do just that. God had to allow Satan to strip Mike's brain to find out if he would keep on keeping on in the face of fear, uncertainty, and terrible memory loss. When encephalitis didn't break him, the devil gave us more blows at the worst possible times. I could almost hear God say to Satan, "See, they are faithful. Now leave them be so they can do the work I have for them." And just like those Bible guys, we proved that we love and trust God with all our hearts. Was it worth it? If you could only see what we see each day, then you would know it is worth it a thousand times over.

God uses anyone who just loves and trusts Him. A lot of mamas don't feel like their lives have any eternal meaning, but no one can see what God is doing. For that reason, we have no idea how important difficult events can be. All God needed from Abraham and Sarah was a son. Please note that God needed Sarah just as much as He needed Abraham. God waited until they were really old to give them that son. Likewise, God waited until we were old and basically retired to suddenly open an opportunity to reach the world with the gospel.

Just in the last three years, many millions of people who have never heard the gospel are hearing through No Greater Joy Ministries. In Iran, perhaps the most hostile regime against the gospel, one out of every eighty people, in just the month of November, saw the Good and Evil book on the web, and up to 70% downloaded it. If those who downloaded it shared it with only one or two family members or friends, then around one out of every forty Iranians would have seen a clear presentation of God's plan of redemption. Iran is the country that is threatening the very existence of Israel. What a precious opportunity to give them the gospel. And that was just one month and one country in one language. It is available online, free, in 43 languages, with many more being added as fast as we can get them translated and formatted. There are over seventy in the works right now.

All over the world people are reading the gospel: Africa, India, Pakistan, Mexico, South America, the Middle East, China, etc. People are hearing and believing the gospel of Jesus. We read their letters of new found faith. Good and Evil books are also being printed in many languages, with the knowledge that the web will likely be unavailable or greatly restricted during the Tribulation. So when the Saints of God are taken out in the Rapture, there will be hard copies of Good and Evil books left behind all over the world. Now our ministry of getting the gospel out is both before and after the Rapture.

I weep with great joy, knowing that some of that multitude standing around the throne of God will be there because we proved faithful. I promise you it was worth it all. For those of you who pour into this ministry, the Bible declares that your reward will be the same as those that faithfully sit at NGJ's desk and make these gospel posts: Some plow, some plant, some water, and some reap.

“After this I beheld, and lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all the nations and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands;” (Rev 7:9)

“And they sung a new song, saying, “Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation.” (Rev 5:9)

“And there was given unto him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed.” (Daniel 7:14)

Sometimes the blackest days are the most important of our lives; sometimes they are the most eternally effective. We need to keep this ever before us in the coming dark days. We can choose to keep

SOMETIMES THE Blackest Days ARE THE MOST Important OF OUR Life

on keeping on, trusting that God's plan is good, or we can become bitter and angry at our suffering and loss. None of us can see the big picture when we sit in ashes, none of us can know the beauty of what God is doing. But all of us can trust and obey, for there is soon coming a day when we will "know even as we also are known." ■

This is our son, Nathan preaching of this subject. It is a good history lesson for your family and it is a good Bible lesson. I encourage you to sit down with your children and watch it.

Father's Day | June 18th, 2023

Lord, DON'T YOU CARE?

by Michael Pearl

This is one of more than fifty stories in Mike's new book on Faith throughout the Bible. It will be available in late Spring—God willing.

All day long Jesus had taught and healed the sick (Mark 3). When the crowd grew large, he moved down by the lake and stood on a boat anchored away from shore (Mark 4), which allowed the crowd of thousands to sit on the hillsides and hear his words. Late in the day, when it began to grow dark, Jesus told the disciples to sail to the other side—about a two-hour trip under normal conditions. Exhausted from the day, he moved to the rear part of the ship, beyond the bow spray, to an elevated spot, and lay down on a cushion, no doubt, with a tarp to cover him, and went sound to sleep.

This is where it gets interesting. Satan is the god of this world (2 Corinthians 4:4), and from the book of Job we know that with God's permission he has the power to bring storms, and direct them to the destruction of property and people. We have already seen Satan attempting to thwart Jesus' ministry on the mount of temptation. And we know that he has infiltrated Jesus' ministry with one of his own agents, a thief and traitor, called "the son of perdition" (John 17:12). And we know that right after Jesus overcame Satan on the mount, he provoked the citizens of Jesus' hometown, Nazareth, to attempt to kill him by casting him off a cliff (Luke 4:29). We also know that Satan will eventually stir the disciples to deny him (Luke 22:31), and the religious Jews to kill him. Likewise, this story reveals Satan's role in present events.

As Jesus slept, Satan sent a mighty storm that tossed the boat around. Then big waves started breaking over the top of the boat, filling it with water, causing it to be in imminent danger of sinking miles away from shore. These fishermen were familiar with these waters and with their boat, but they became very fearful at this sudden and uncommonly furious storm. They must have been amazed that Jesus was still in a state of exhausted sleep, but in desperation they decided to wake him.

They shook him awake, and said to him, "Master, carest thou not that we perish?" Of all things, they accused him of not caring for their safety—of being insensitive to their suffering. (Hello, human, Christian person.) Their attitudes are unbelievable, unless you view them through the mirror of self-knowledge. They assumed that by allowing it go on this far, he didn't care what happened to them. All lack of faith is rooted in that sentiment. When frightful or painful times come, does it make us feel God may not be caring for us as we think he should?

This is the perfect illustration of faithlessness. They doubted God's commitment to their wellbeing. Faith is believing "he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him" (Hebrews 11:6). The rebuke they hurled at Jesus was an indictment, a slight on his character. It was anything but believing "he is a rewarder." They were making Jesus subservient to their interests, as if it was his full time duty to protect them from bad things. This is worse than lack of faith. It is grievance in the place of faith.

When they woke him, he quickly stood up into the storm, holding on to the rigging, and, as waves drenched them, he "rebuked the wind" sternly (Mark 4:39). The word rebuke is never used toward an inanimate object. For context, in another places, we read things like, "Jesus rebuked the devil" (Matthew 17:18). Jesus saw the wind for what it was, the work of Satan attempting to end the ministry of the second Adam who came to establish the Kingdom of Heaven upon the earth, and turn the hearts of men back to faith in God. So he rebuked the wind like a man does a rebellious child, commanding

diligently SEEK him. HEB. II:6

it to cease; and cease it did, like turning off a fan. After all, he is the creator of wind, so it had to obey him. But the water remained choppy even after the wind ceased, so he said to the water, “Peace, be still,” and it instantly flattened out as it obeyed its creator, leaving the lake as calm as any they had ever seen.

Within five seconds of waking Jesus, the disciples went from violent tossing to silently squatting in a waterlogged boat on still waters. They were afraid before, but their fear reached a new level as they stared up in wonder at Jesus standing up on the stern as Lord of creation.

And then he rebuked them, saying, “Why are ye so fearful? How is it that ye have no faith?” The question was, “Why do you fear with me in the boat; does my presence not inspire faith?” Regardless, “they feared exceedingly, and said one to another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and sea obey him” (Mark 4:41)? There is a thrilling song titled, “Behold what manner of man is this” that celebrates this moment. He had called them “slow of heart.” And this revealed their spiritual slowness.

This story is a great example of faith not being a personal power arising from within us, rather, faith is how we view Jesus Christ in his commitment to our welfare. The problem is, we develop selfish, sissy, and arrogant expectations and try to exercise “our faith” to get him to conform to our interests. When he said, “Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body... for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things” (Matthew 6), he meant that our trust and surrender should begin before we decide what the end should be. Outcome driven faith is no faith at all; it is presumption. We want to avoid the storms of life, and sail on calm waters. We don’t want to be buffeted by unfavorable winds, and be tossed about uncontrollably, and be brought to the edge of death. But God wants our trust in him to be greater than Satan’s tricks, nature’s fury, and the realities of life in this sinful flesh. The “trying of your faith” is real if you are riding a boat off into the dark with Jesus. For Satan is ever conspiring to find our weak spot and eroded our confidence in God.

Jesus is so sure of his commitment to us that he wonders, “Why are ye so fearful?” A teaching question! When we have confidence in the goodwill of he who is riding out the storm with us, it won’t prevent us from getting wet, but it will cast out all fear (1 John 4:18). ■

The Bondage of Calvinism - the doctrine that accuses God!

'Truth does not mind being questioned, but a lie does not like being challenged.'

For over 400 years, Calvinism has accused God of being the author of sin and laid at His feet the sole responsibility for the fallen state of mankind.

This package includes:

The Other side of Calvinism

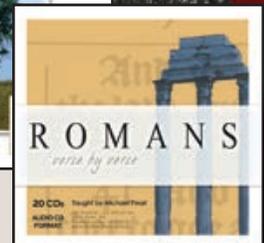

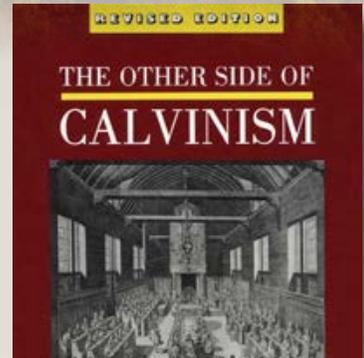

Michael Pearl states that this is "the best book exposing the heresies of Calvinism. If you are a Bible believer concerned about TRUTH, this is a must-read."

Sinful Nature | MP3

Taught by Michael Pearl, answers some of the ridiculous teachings of ancient heresies of Calvinism. And how, for too long, Reformed theology has robbed the church of the power of God.

Romans | MP3

The Book of Romans is one of the most important books in the Bible, addressing the hard theological issues that have been the foundation of the Christian faith down through the centuries. If you are not saved, you will know what salvation means by studying Romans. And if you are saved, you will be able to rejoice in your salvation.

Finding the joy

by Hannah Schrock

I'm Hannah Schrock, a young, second-generation homeschooling mama to four precious little women. Deb asked me to share my thoughts on finding joy in the daily monotony of home education, and though I certainly do not consider myself an expert on such matters and do not wish to sound like a holier-than-thou, condescending know-it-all; I do wish to help others remember just how good we have it; and I want to oblige the kind lady who asked me to write. Here are six things that bring a thankful spark of happiness to my days as a teacher.

1- Curriculum

Finding the right curriculum that helps you and your child enjoy learning and teaching can make or break your confidence and commitment to homeschooling. It is well worth it to apply yourself to finding what best suits your family. Take into account all the factors necessary: your child's learning style, and what you used in school, since you'll be more familiar with it, or maybe something polar opposite if you didn't learn well using it. Consider Dad's opinion and job constraints. If he will be teaching a subject, it's best if he can do it quickly and easily after work so your family time in the evenings is not all taken up with schooling.

Your family's natural routine is a big component to consider. For my family, I need something that is quick. We seldom stick to a schedule, and I have a full plate just being Mom, wife, a pastor's wife, a farmer's wife, secretary for our three businesses, and homeschooling. I don't have time to plan elaborate unit studies or even print them out. I cannot use something online because our rural area doesn't have Internet. I want something that engages multiple learning styles and has biblical roots. I want it to foster excitement in my children. So I tried two curriculums before settling on the one we use now. It is so wonderful to have a curriculum I actually enjoy teaching and my children are excited about! What works for one family may not work for yours, so do your research and experimentation. I know many who have experienced great results with vastly different curriculums. The right curriculum is such a blessing, and I thank God for it often!

2- Kids

This may seem obvious, but having children to raise and invest in is such an honor. God was so kind to entrust us with the position of mentor for their short, formative years. Those little eyes look to you because you are their world. If the teens are going to seek your advice, they need to have felt safe trusting you for their entire life, otherwise they will be reluctant to ask. Having the opportunity to guide them to grow into who God wants them to be is such a huge blessing. They are little sponges, soaking up everything we are teaching them, good or otherwise. God is good to give us this challenge of raising children, and it should cause us to look to him for wisdom as the difficulties of child rearing and homeschooling present themselves.

3- Safety

I won't describe the debauchery that exists in this horrid world; it makes itself fully known without my referencing it. But I thank my God for all the safety our home provides. Bullies and cowards are rampant, and pretty much inevitable in the brick-and-mortar school environment. Being protected and encouraged by a trusted adult can give children the ability to have courage to make a strong stand when they are grown. Going against the evil flow is much more challenging as a child. It is rare for a child to grow up to be a morally strong adult when educated in a typical school. Children need to feel safe.

Reading missionary and wartime stories aloud is such a reminder to me and a lesson for my children of how good we have it. Suddenly, my daughter shedding a few tears over not understanding her math lesson after the first explanation seems quite minuscule. In comparison, young Jewish children not only missed months of school during the Second World War but were led to gas chambers and worse. Children are often abandoned at birth in Kenya, and mothers are forced to send their children to communist schools in a country I cannot name. It helps me realize that our daily issues are small. We are so safe and blessed.

4- A Biblical Worldview

Being able to tell our children who God is, why we are here, and what he expects us to do is something millions of parents around the world are not permitted to do. Right now, many a mama is begging God to help her child not be indoctrinated with the agenda her country is shoving on the children. It bears saying again, we are so blessed with freedom to share the truth from God's Word. This is my main reason for choosing home education. I am very grateful for the opportunity.

5- Supplies

This one may seem small and maybe a bit silly, but I just love seeing little pint jars full of pencils, markers, and crayons neatly lined up on the shelf. The three-hole punch delights my soul. I still have a huge attraction to a clean sheet of white paper—so many possibilities exist when a blank sheet of paper lies before me and a sharp pencil is in my grasp! Having all the stuff like glue and paint makes me so giddy. Perhaps I'm immature, but my kids don't mind. And such small thankfulness never fails to bring out the genuine smile lines in abundance around my eyes.

6- A Lovely Environment

In a study conducted in Nigeria, researchers found that “before students can succeed academically, they must feel safe, both physically and mentally, and to have a safe learning environment, students must feel welcomed, supported, and respected. Personalizing learning helps students develop skills, including thinking critically, using knowledge and information to solve complex problems, working collaboratively, communicating effectively, learning how to acquire knowledge, and developing academic mindsets that will greatly increase students' engagement.”*

I love a nice, neat, inviting space. It is so wonderful to have a home of my own to make special for my family. The atmosphere is more relaxing when I take the time to do the housework daily, light a candle, make coffee, and put my feet up on an ottoman before teaching lessons. It brings more peace to my whole family. My girls can cuddle up with their favorite blanket while practicing spelling. My toddler wears princess dresses while learning the ABCs. They can swing while reading their books, and they can have some homemade hot cocoa as a way to make their fractions more enjoyable. Having the living room walls painted a calming color and having well-composed music playing softly in the background makes schooling more relaxing.

I am so grateful for the opportunity to raise my children the way my beloved husband and I see fit. Being grateful brings joy. Practicing gratitude is a good lifestyle. I pray often to have wisdom to raise my kiddos up in a way that they will ultimately love my precious Savior, Jesus Christ. I am so very, very thankful for God allowing me to be able to home educate my little women. ■

iMissions Update

We use 100% of the funds you donate to the iMissions fund to buy ads through Google and Facebook offering a free download of the Good and Evil comic book Bible in over 30 languages. Most of the people we are reaching are in nations that are restricted or hostile to the gospel. Here is one recent story of a man impacted by this ministry.

By J.D. Grimes

Every day we receive email messages from people who have clicked our ads and downloaded the Good and Evil book. Here's a screenshot of one man's recent message:

Wael [REDACTED]

Greetings and appreciation

My name is Wael from Egypt, Muslim, my age 51 year

I have dreamed twice of Jesus in a year since that time and I have a desire to know a lot about the Christian religion

Thank you very much and I hope that will answer me

My assistant, Adam, messaged back and forth with Wael a few times, sharing the gospel with him. He expressed his desire to find a church and meet with believers. Through a connection at another ministry we were able to pass his contact info along to a believer with local connections named Samir, himself a former Muslim. Samir spoke to Wael on the phone, and here is the update we received from him by audio message:

"Guess what? I was talking with Wael, that you sent me his email yesterday from the Good and Evil comic book. Guess what, again? He just prayed with me to accept Jesus a few minutes ago. He is such a wonderful person with such a tender heart. Oh my goodness. It was an amazing, amazing call. We talked for about two hours. So I can't wait to tell you all the details about it. Praise God and thank you so much for the connection."

Wael was also very thankful to find people who could help him:

W Wael [REDACTED]

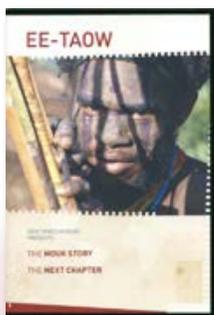

The first time in my life I feel that there is a heart contains my soul since I dreamed of Christ and read about his life and teachings about Christ I find that there is a change in myself and my life and I thank Christ that I found a friend like you

A few weeks ago I received another update on Wael:

Samir has been continuing to connect with [Wael] and is super excited about his growth and maturity of faith. He also got him connected with an evangelical church in Cairo that has a lot of former Muslims. Wael has been beyond encouraged! So that's some pretty great fruit!

One planted, another watered, and God gave the increase!

Egypt is not a safe place to openly share the gospel, and were it not for a digital outreach program like iMissionaries and the donors that make it possible, many people like Wael might never have an opportunity to know Christ. We are truly blessed to be laboring in these fields, where there is so much precious fruit. Please join us in praying that God would send laborers into this harvest all over the world. ■

EE-TAOW | DVD

This is a remarkable story of a native tribe being won to the Lord. The gospel is presented chronologically and the results are spectacular. It is a great video to watch with your children, grandchildren, Sunday School students, etc.
